Teacher Appreciation Week

This week, we celebrate educators and nurses with Teacher Appreciation Week, Day of the Teacher, and National School Nurse Day. Thank you for choosing a profession that deserves an Appreciation YEAR rather than week or day. Thank you for making an impact for the better on both the students of today and the educators of tomorrow.

We've said it before, but it bears repeating – that while our jobs do not always come with immediate gratification, the reward surpasses the wait when we see a student grow in academics, social skills, problem-solving, are able to gain strengths, and become a little more resilient because of something we have said, taught, read, or provided in an activity. So, heads held high today, this week, and throughout the profession, for work that makes the phrase “a job well done” take on a larger-than-life meaning. Celebrate your accomplishments and know it does not go unnoticed.

Bargaining

The HEA bargaining team has been in session all day today. Stay tuned for an update by Wednesday of next week.
